

THE JOINT TAX BOARD'S NEW TIN REGISTRATION SYSTEM

AUGUST 2019

Welcome to a new age in tax administration as the Joint Tax Board's ("JTB") new Tax Identification Number registration system ("the new system") goes live. The system was developed to consolidate a national unified taxpayers' database.

A pestering issue in the tax administration has been poor tax compliance, difficulty in payment of taxes, multiple taxations amongst others.

Tax authorities have taken steps to increase the tax base,[1] and at present, Nigeria has a tax base of 20 million persons.[2] It has been reported that the taxpayer roll may likely hit 45 million persons in Q3, 2019 as a result of the efforts of the JTB.[3]

That underscores the need for a central database in effective tax administration. The New TIN System is a novel initiative of the JTB which presents a consolidated tax database for the entire country.[4] In other words, taxpayers' information will be integrated into the central database, and various tax authorities can access the information.

For instance, Lagos State issues a Taxpayers Identification Digit (PID) to taxpayers, and further to this initiative, the Lagos State Inland Revenue Service published a notice of its intention to integrate with the JTB TIN.

Nigeria tax to GDP ratio of 6% is one of the lowest in the world,[5] hopefully the JTB innovation will positively influence the ratio.

The new system may also reduce the incidences of double taxation since tax information would be more accessible.
